Analyzing Stories from a Narratives-as-Practice Perspective

The workshop will introduce students to the analysis of narratives as social and semiotic practices. We will first provide some background on how interactional approaches to narrative analysis have evolved from the 1990's to the present and on how they have challenged text-based definitions of stories by privileging their study in context. We will then discuss some of the differences between storytelling in face-to-face encounters and in digital contexts and will present concrete examples of analyses of stories published on social media platforms.

Please register via KSL by Monday, 25 March (root number: 489012)

This is a CSLS workshop, MA and PhD students will receive 0.5 ECTS for active participation.
